1. About the Sector

Capital Goods industry is often called the 'mother of all manufacturing industry'. By definition, any good (plant, machinery, equipment) that is used to manufacture other products (either directly or indirectly) is called a Capital Good. Therefore the performance of capital goods sector is inextricably linked to the overall manufacturing sector.

Manufacturing is a key contributor to the economic development of any nation. The Capital Goods sector is critical to the manufacturing sector as it provides the much needed machinery and equipment to various manufacturing sectors such as Engineering, Construction, Infrastructure, Consumer goods, amongst others. The Capital Goods industry contributes about 12% to the total manufacturing activity in India which translates to about 2% of GDP.

The capital goods market In India is fragmented with majority of operational units in the Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) sector, beyond few large players. These are involved in low-value added fabrication and assembly works and cater to small segments of a sub-sector, often serving domestic demand only. Due to their low scale of operation they are unable to compete effectively with large foreign competitors.

2. Project Requirement

In manufacturing sector, large number of work force learn their skills while working as a helper and keep moving up basis their capacity, learning or opportunity. This is a known fact the Current annual Capacity of skilling to new persons joining Labour market annually is only 25%. Even the quality of these trained workforce varies in terms of quality and output.

This large workforce works in an unrecognized world and is easily exploited due to lack of certification or documentation of their skills, experience and competencies. The marginalized workforce which faces a lot of challenge in meeting their both end meet prefer to learn by earn instead of learning a Job in a systematic way. Such workforce though skilled do not find any recognition of their learning and gets deprived of many important and life transformational benefits.

Nearly 12.8 million new person join the Labour market each year how ever only about 3.1 million are skilled through a formal process. Rest either couldnot make up to training due to various reasons such as lack of interest, socio-economic conditions, lack of options and awareness etc.

3. Program Objective

To address the challenges of the unrecognized workforce, Recognition of Prior Learning(RPL) holds the key.

The objective of this program was to Orient, Recognize and Certify prior learning of the workforce working in manufacturing related Job roles. It consisted of the following module:

- An orientation on latest skill ecosystem
- Capsule course on Health & Safety
- Awareness towards safe working practises during Corona
- Digital Literacy
- An assessment at site for the workforce

It aimed to orient and assess the workforce to recognize their competencies at different NSQF levels and areas. These certificates may be useful for getting recognition of the participants skills as well as in their future job opportunities.

4. PROGRAM EXECUTION

The RPL program was conducted in 2 industries namely JSL, Gurgaon & PR Components, Faridabad. The selection of the companies was done on the basis of sub sector and type of Industry. While JSL plant was large and engaged in Welding and Fitting work of stainless steel, PR Components is a SME unit supplying machined components to Indian and International clients. Both the industries had large number of uncertified on-roll employees who did not had a formal certificate to showcase their professional competencies.

Once the industries were shortlisted, following steps were undertaken
