Introduction

To secure the right to education of every child, schools are required to identify and accommodate neurodivergent children and young people along with the neurotypical students. Existing Teacher Training courses in India are yet to include this topic, and teachers lack knowledge, training, and experience to teach students with neurological differences.

Recognising this critical need, the School of Education at Netaji Subhas Open University, Kolkata organised an online workshop on Understanding Neurodiversity in collaboration with the Commonwealth Educational Media Centre for Asia (CEMCA), New Delhi.

Neurodiversity is a scientific concept arising from brain imaging. A number of brain studies have shown that people with learning or thinking differences are “wired” differently than their peers. In other words, some children are born with brains that think, learn and process information differently than others. The term neurodiversity has since come to include the following variations:

- Autistic Spectrum Disorders (ASD)
- Developmental Coordination Disorder (DCD or dyspraxia)
- Dyslexia
- Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)
- Dyscalculia
- Other neurological disorders.

Aim

- Understand the basic concept of Neurodiversity
- Build positive mindsets towards supporting neurodivergent students
- Create awareness about inclusive education practices

Objectives

1. To impart knowledge about the concepts of neurodiversity and building positive mind-sets
2. To create sensitive processes and tools for effective screening of neurodiversity and assessment of learning needs
3. To enhance teachers' ability to understand and identify neurodiversity; increase awareness about the social and academic implications for students, and to increase the capability of implementing inclusive education practices.
4. To share, develop, and embed existing good practices for accommodation and intervention among professionals to support neurodivergent students.

Invitation

CEMCA, New Delhi invited Manobina Chakraborty to conduct a workshop on Neurodiversity for school teachers, faculty and students of the School of Education at Netaji Subhash Open University Kolkata.

Participants

Eighty-five participants from various schools and universities in India attended the online workshop. Participants were mostly teachers, para teachers or aspiring teachers (B.ED. students). University lecturers, assistant professors, education consultants, and researchers also participated in the workshop. List of participants is placed in Appendix 1.

Methodology

The workshop was conducted online through the virtual platform ZOOM. The methodology used was interaction, PowerPoint Presentation, Audio-visuals, Online quiz and problem-solving discussions. The participants took part in brainstorming questions through chat box.

Date: The workshop was held on June 4, 2021, from 10:00 AM to 12:20PM

Venue: The workshop was conducted online through the virtual platform ZOOM.

Workshop Proceedings

The workshop was conducted in presence of dignitaries from both CEMCA and NSOU.

From CEMCA:

Prof. Madhu Parhar, Director
Dr. Manas Panigrahi, Senior Programme Officer (Education)
Dr. Shiffon Chatterjee, Senior Programme Officer (Online & Blended Learning)

From NSOU

Prof. Sumanta Chattaraj, Professor, School of Education
Dr. Abhedananda Panigrahi, Coordinator, School of Education

Prof. Madhu Parhar welcomed all the participants and gave an overview of the subject. She explained the meaning of Neurodiversity and discussed the need of inclusion of this subject in the Teachers' Training programmes in India.

Details of the technical session

“Understanding Neurodiversity” workshop was based upon the importance of recognising and responding to individuals’ profiles of learning strengths and needs. It recognised the principle that every teacher is a teacher of Special Educational Needs and Disability (SEND) and that teachers need to make ‘reasonable adjustments’ to their teaching in order to meet diverse learning needs.

The workshop addressed such issues by focusing not on labels but rather on support based on observable behaviours and learner profiling, and, further, on utilising a range of whole-class techniques to establish a ‘neurodiversity-friendly classroom’.

Devised as a train-the-trainer model, it was intended to be cascaded by teachers at a ‘core skills’ level.

The workshop was divided into four sections:

Part 1: 'Seeing the whole picture'. This section promotes the importance of holistic learner profiling, taking into account the range of strengths and challenges that might be present in a learner with an SpLD.

Part 2: 'Understanding neurodiversity'. In this section of the training, a combined SpLD/neurodiversity checklist of dimensions of learning (both cognitive and affective) is presented, which has been devised to take into account the overlapping nature of SpLDs. The checklist aims to provide a framework through which to observe and understand learner behaviours, and encourages teachers to look beyond individual labels and preconceptions of what it might mean to have dyslexia, dyspraxia and so on.

Part 3: Explanation about prominent Neurodiversity areas, namely: Autism, Dyslexia, Dyspraxia and ADHD.

Part 4: 'Classroom support strategies'. This section underlines the key message that 'The purpose of identification is to work out what action the school needs to take, not to fit a pupil into a category' It offers a 'toolkit' of easy-to-implement 'core' strategies, also encouraging teachers to build on their own best practice in order to develop inclusive learning in their classrooms.

The toolkit offers strategies for:

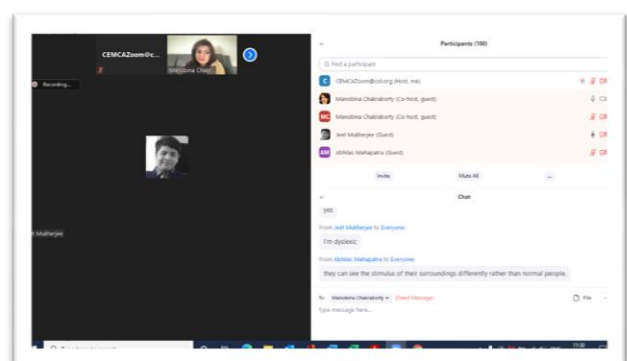

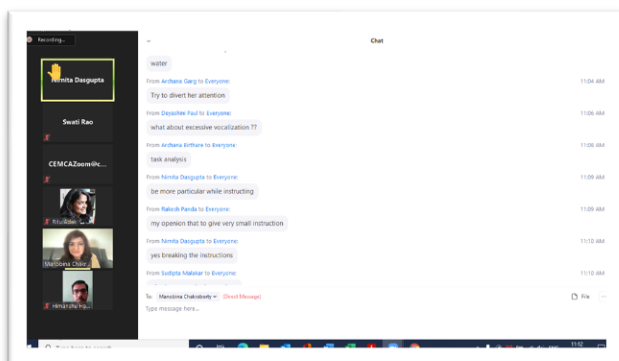

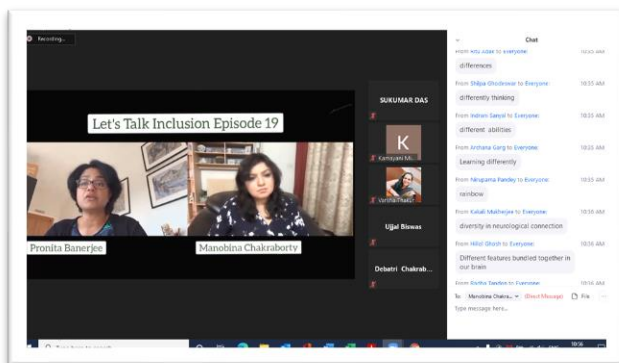

- fostering self-esteem
- understanding challenging behaviour
- teaching metacognition
- using multisensory techniques
- making text reader-friendly
- breaking down instructions/reducing memory load
- allowing 'thinking time'
- keeping language simple.

Conclusion

If there is one key ‘take home’ message from the findings of the Teaching for Neurodiversity initiative, it seems to be that encouraging teachers to focus upon individual learner strengths and needs – not just SEND ‘labels’ – and offering them a toolkit to get started on this can be empowering.

This initiative seems to have tapped a real area of training need in the teaching workforce and raises questions about the possibility of more of such training in initial teacher education.

Some of the Responses received through Chat box during the workshop

What have we learnt from the video 1?

- Child's inability
- Child's struggle
- Child can't communicate
- Child is helpless
- Child can't retain attention
- Teacher should understand the child
- Teacher's attitude is wrong

How would you describe Neurodiversity in one word?

◆ Chat box replies

- Difficulty
- Extraordinary
- Unique
- Different
- Gifted
- Rainbow

What is Autism

◆ Chat box replies

- different way of communicating
- inability to communicate
- neurological disorder

If you had to eat only one food for the rest of your life, which one would it be?

What is Dyslexia?

Can you say that at this point, you understand the child/ young person in your class whom you had considered dumb/ stubborn / badly-behaved until yesterday?

All Yes

Tell us in one or two words, what “Diversity” and “Inclusion” mean to you?

Difference

Involvement

Acceptance

Indiscrimination

Including differently-abled

Togetherness

Involvement for all

Getting together

Notable Response

◆ From Dr. Abhedananda Panigrahi

Diversity and inclusion are interconnected concepts -but they are far from interchangeable. Diversity is about representation or the makeup of an entity. Inclusion is about how well the contributions, presence and perspective of different groups of people are valued and integrated into an environment

Feedback of the workshop

Participants were requested to fill up the feedback designed using Google form. Feedback link was shared via Zoom chat box at the end of the session.
